Of the out-of-town weddings celebrated last week that of Miss Ethel Phelps Stokes, the third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, to John Sherman Hoyt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred M. Hoyt, which took place in Trinity Church, Le X. at noon on Thursday, was of the most absorbing interest to New-York society. The young couple are well known, and there was a great turning out of their friends to witness the ceremony which was accompanied by vocal music given by the surpliced members of the choir of St. Bartholos Church, this city. The breakfast, which followed at Shadow Brook, the mammoth country name of the bride's parents, was a gorgeous and il-regulated affair. The bride looked supremely happy in her gown of heavy white satin, made a train three and a half yards long. waist was covered with point lace, and the skirt was made with a single ruffle of lace across the front breadth. The side panels were well covered trail of orange blossoms, which extended shoulders, where they were fastened under a heavy fall of lace. The tulle veil was held with net of orange blossoms. A superb diamond pendant of diamonds given by the bridend a diamond crescent, a gift from the ther, were the only ornaments worn ss Helen Stokes, her sister's maid of honor, and the bridesmaids, Miss Mildred Stokes, Miss Carolesmaids Miss Midred Stokes, Miss Carokes, sisters of the bride; Miss Rosina Hoyt, of the bride; Miss Rosina Hoyt, of the bride; Miss Luisita Ledand, esde Stokes, cousin of the bride, and Miss Barnes, were in effective costumes of pale felk, made after the Louis XVI style, with hiffon flohus. Their hats were of black velesed with rosettes of yellow silk and large one buckles. Each young lady wore her from the bride, an enamelled yellow chrysim diamond pin. At the breakfast the party occupied a heart-shaped table in a ywindow in the dining-room. A pretty suras the souvenirs presented to each member party by Mrs. Stokes. They were heart-white satin boxes, containing a piece of white satin boxes, containing a piece of diding cake, the covers of the box being I with the name of the receiver, the initials and the date in gold. almost been settled—the ushers, instead of heading the procession, as they are accustomed to do in New-York, will pass down the side alsies and stand in double file on either side of the chancet steps, so that the bride, her father and the bridermaids may pass between them. The bridesmalds, as already published in The Tribune, w.ll be Miss Katharine Duer, who will serve as first bridesmald; Miss Evelyn Burden, Miss Marie Winthrop, Miss Morton, eidest daughter of Governor and Mrs. Levi P. Morton; Miss Daisy Post, Miss Julia Jay, Miss May Goelet and Miss Elsa Bronson. The coatumes to be worn by these young women will be of white satin, rather simply made, and adorned with girdles and sashes of pale-blue satin ribbon. There will be little trimming on the skirt and bodizes extends of foliage and flowers, included the latit of palm foliage and trails of rare flowers. The high dome will be lavishly and gracefully hind.

The Duke of Mariborough, accompanied by his best man, his cousin, Ivor Churchill Guest, will meet the bride at the entrance to the chancel. To Mr. Guest and the ushers, Richard T. Wilson, fr. Reginald Ronalds, Hamilton Wilkes Cary, Brockholst Cutting and Herbert D. Robbins, the Duke will present scarfpins in the shape of a ducal coronet set with diamonds and rubles.

Bishop Henry C. Potter, assisted by the Rev. Dr. John Wesley Brown, the rector of St. Thomas's Church, will officiate at the marriage service. Bishop Littlejohn, of the Protestant Episcopal diccese of Long Island, will pronounce the benediction. The other clergymen, who will probably be in the chancel, will be the Rev. Dr. Joseph H. Rylance,

THE DUKE OF MARLBOROUGH.

There are indications that one part of even the less reputable element of New-York is dissatisfied with the discrimination of Tammany in favor of the other disreputable part. Waido Eurnett, of Southboro, Mass., who was for some years chaplain at Blenhelm, during the residence there of the Duke's grandmother, the Duchess of Marlborough.

There will be few of the pews in the church reserved. The front pew on the right side of the middle aisle will be occupied by Mrs. Vanderbilt, it the mother of the bride, and her sons; in the pew directly hehind Mrs. Vanderbilt will be her sister, Miss Amide Smith. The front pew on the left hand side of the middle aisle will be reserved for Sir Julian Pauncefole, the British Ambassador, and his family. The other pews on both sides of the aisle, about one-quarter of the distance to the middle of the bridesmaids and ushers, and a very limited number of intimate friends. The front pews in the side aisles will be occupied by the tutors, governesses and upper servants belonging to Mrs. Vanderbilt's household.

The full choir of St. Thomas's Church will take part in the vocal service which will accompany the marriage ceremony, and beginning at 10:30 g'clock.

Mr. Warren, the organist, will give a concert on the organ, playing the following selections:

THE VANDERBILT WEDDING MUSIC. To The Editor of The Tribune.

Sir: Announcement is made that the rector of St. Thomas's Church has arranged for vocal music at the approaching nuptials of Miss Vanderbilt with the Duke of Marlborough. Among the chants or songs is announced the Sixty-seventh Psalm, "God be merciful unto us and bless us," etc. I would like to know if this in not the song chanted by the riuguenots jointly as each one of their number was beheaded by the severity and cruelty of Catherine de Medici, the Duc de Guise and his party at Amboise. What was the date of this occurrence and was it not the first time the Psalm is recorded as being chanted at a ceremony? Is there any good picture or representation of Amboise, the scene of this Protestant (Huguenot) massacre, and where can it be seen? Is this song exactly suited to a weiding ceremony? Your reply will greatly chilge.

A TRIBUNE READER. Huguenots jointly as each one of their number a wellding erremony? Your reply will great blige. New-York, Nov. 2, 1855.

(In answer to "Tribune Reader," the Sixtyseventh Psalm, translated in French by Clement Marot about 1559, was chanted by the Huguenet prisoners at the castle of Amboise as they were brought out for execution. Each prisoner as led to the block chanted it with his comrades, beginning with Jean Louis Alberic, Baron de Raunay, the first executed, and ending with Michael Jean Louis, Baron de Castelnau Chalosse, the last of the group of Huguenot noblemen, who sang it alone as he walked to the scaffold for sang it alone as he walked to the Scalinst 1560.

There is no previous record known to us of the chanting of the psalm at a public ceremonial other than church worship. It is probable that it had been used in church services. Hence these Protestant noblemen were familiar with it.

A fine large picture of Amboise is hanging in

As to the final question of the song being suited to a wedding ceremony, the Protestant Episcopal Church leaves the selection of songs in ceremony not part of the prescribed church wership to the rector or official, who judges of its propriety.—
